Maxine Cheshire Potpourri Post 7/17/73

The General Services Administration has come up with a $500 figure for the cost of the sod which they claim was installed in front of Julie and David Eisenhower's house because Secret Service cars and other government vehicles had parked on the grass and ruined it. Included in the cars which did the damage, a GSA spokesman says, was First Lady Pat Nixon's chauffeured White House limousine . . . Former presidential assistant John Ehrlichman is having trouble selling his Great Falls, Va., house at $139,000, so he was shopping around for another real estate agent last week . . . The Ehrlichmans may or may not be leaving Washington for good. When Mrs. Ehrlichman played her final game at the McLean Indoor Tennis Court last week, she didn't say goodbye to owner Frank Eubank Jr. She said: "See you in the fall" . . . A postscript on the recent visit of Soviet Communist party chief Leonid Brezhnev: To make him feel at home, President Nixon asked his friend Don Kendall, chairman of the board of Pepsico, to put a case of Russian vodka in Blair House. It's Kendall's soft drink company which has an import-export deal to exchange Pepsi for vodka.

© 1973, Washington Post/Chicago Tribune-New York News Syndicate Inc.